

INTERN SUCCESS STORY

NASIR MCDANIEL

From the first day, I felt welcome.

My journey with the Comptroller's office began when I applied for an internship in June 2024. I had honestly never thought about working for the state before I applied, but after reading through a few reviews online from others I decided to test my luck by applying for an internship. During the interview it made me happy to speak with people who wanted to put my best interests first when finding a role within the Comptroller's office.

From the first day of the internship, everyone was nice, helpful and answered any questions that I had — no matter how many questions I asked. I also got the chance to work with multiple departments, which gave me a better understanding of how communications work between departments as well as between applications.

As an intern, we were given an extraordinary experience.

I also got to participate in a few events over the summer and learn from a group of qualified people as well as explore Austin with our peers. It was extremely fun to participate in all the activities of the CPA Olympics alongside everyone in the agency.

My overall experience with the Comptroller's office has been great, I'm glad that I get to work with an agency filled with amazing people who are kind, intelligent and always willing to help. I would recommend to anyone who has not already thought about working with the state to give it a try; it is an experience that would be beneficial to everyone, but especially those who are beginning their careers just as I was.
